Chromatic black launches nationwide “justice in action” event series on MLK Day weekend

As the Omicron variant spreads throughout the United States, the Keep Black Love Alive campaign, in cooperation with some of the most prolific Black storytellers and artists, has launched nationwide “Justice in Action” event series on MLK Day weekend.

The series, which includes live performances, art exhibits, and community workshops, aims to raise awareness about the systemic issues faced by the black community and to promote effective community leadership. The campaign is partnering with some of the most prominent artists and activists to ensure that the event series will be impactful and engaging.

Centering Equity in Collective Impact

Centering equity further requires diverse representation in leadership and specific strategies to shift power, so that those with formal power — in the United States and much of the Western world, mostly white and male — are able to engage with, listen to, share power with, and act on the wisdom of the community.
